At first, Jerry and Tuffy couldn't imagine what was going on in the room outside their little mousehole apartment. All the familiar furniture had been moved into another room, and now two strange men were bringing things into it that the puzzled little mice had never seen before. First of all there were two tin cans, then two little brooms with very short handles, and last, the thing that interested them most of all, a tall wooden contraption with steps that almost reached to the ceiling. One of the strange men took one of the little brooms and one of the tin cans and walked up the steps of the tall contraption. He dipped the little broom in the tin can and then rubbed it on the wall. The other stranger just stood on the floor, but like the man on the contraption, he too dipped a little broom in the other tin can and rubbed it on the wall.

"What are they doing, Jerry?" squeaked Tuffy excitedly, as he peered out of the little mousehole.

"Look! They're rubbing BLUE stuff on the wall!" cried Jerry. "Those guys are PAINTERS! They're gonna make the whole room blue, and I betcha it's gonna look real pretty."

"Yeh," said Tuffy wistfully. "I wish our place in here was colored like that. It sure would brighten it up a lot."

"Hmm. Maybe we can get a little of that stuff and do the job ourselves," said Jerry

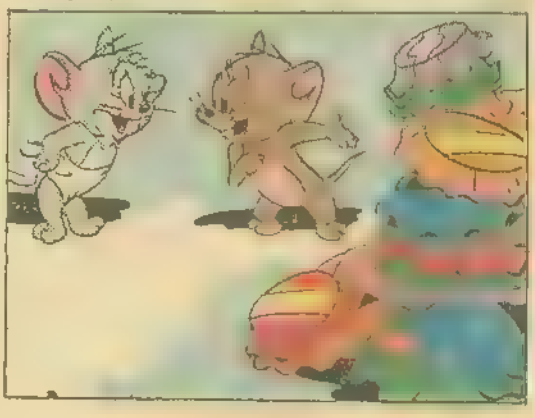
"O boy! Why not?" cried Tuffy "Maybe if they leave the room for a little while, we can sneak some out of the can!"

"Well, we'll just have to keep an eye on 'em," said Jerry.

The morning passed, but neither of the painters left the room. They rubbed their brushes back and forth, back and forth, until finally all four walls were covered. Then suddenly they put their brushes down and left the room together.

"Gosh! I thought they'd never leave," cried Tuffy, looking after them.

"Say, I bet they've gone to lunch!" shouted Jerry. "It must be twelve o'clock."



"That reminds me," said Tuffy, "I'm a little hungry myself. I was so busy watching those guys that I forgot all about my appetite."

"Listen, Tuff," said Jerry, "first we got to get some of that paint. After that we'll get something to eat from the pantry."

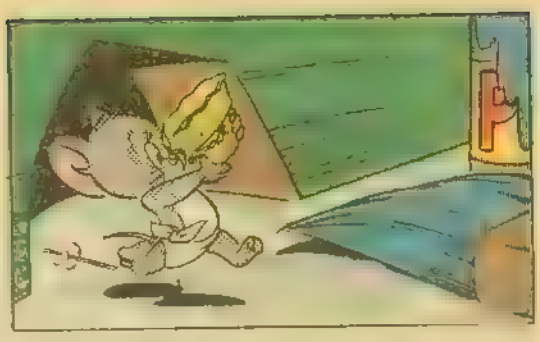
"Okay," said Tuffy. "But let's hurry."

"We'll use those bottle caps we've been saving," said Jerry as he ran off to a dark corner of the mousehole where a dozen or so bottle caps were stacked one on the other. The little mice carried the bottle caps two at a time out to the other room and placed them by one of the cans of paint. Then, climbing up along the handle, Jerry reached the rim of the paint can

"Careful you don't fall in, Jerry," called Tuffy. "I don't think I'd like living with a blue mouse."

"Okay. I'm ready," said Jerry "You can throw me one of those caps now"

"Catch!" said Tuffy, tossing a bottle cap high in the air to Jerry. Jerry had to reach way out to catch it, and it looked for a moment as if he were going to fall into the paint can But after teetering back and forth a second or two he finally regained his balance.



"Well, what are you waiting for?" shouted Jerry to Tuffy who was standing motionless below with his hands over his eyes.

"The SPLASH," answered Tuffy.

"There's not gonna be any splash," said Jerry, who was now firmly poised on the rim of the paint can. "Now push one of those bottle caps directly underneath me."

Jerry then dipped his bottle cap into the paint and poured it into the bottle cap below. Pretty soon all the caps were filled and Jerry climbed down off the can

"Okay," said Jerry. "Now we have to get these things into our apartment. Be careful you don't spill any."

In a short while all the paint-filled bottle caps were lying safely side by side in the little mousehole.

"Well, that's that," said Tuffy. "Let's go out to the pantry now I'm starved!"

"Okay, pal," said Jerry "I'm a little hungry myself But we'll have to be extra careful It's broad daylight and ol' Tom is prob'ly prowling around somewhere near by."

"By the way," said Tuffy, as the two mice made their way cautiously toward the pantry. "I just thought of somethin'. What are we gonna use to rub that blue stuff on OUR walls? We haven't got any of those little short-handled brooms."

"Darned if I know," said Jerry. "I've been wondering about that myself, but I just can't think of anything we can use—unless, we smear it on with our hands!"

"Gosh, we can't do that!" cried Tuffy. "That sure would be messy!"

"No. I guess we'll have to figure out some other way," said Jerry

The little mice managed to get to the pantry without being seen by anyone, and pretty soon they were browsing around among the boxes and cans of food on the shelves.

"Hey! Here's something good!" shouted Tuffy.

"Shhh," cautioned Jerry from the other side of the shelf "Be careful You know how sharp ol' Tom's ears are. What did you find?"

"Look!" said Tuffy. "A great big beautiful loaf of bread!"

In less time than it takes to tell, the mice had opened one corner of the wax wrapper and were hungrily stuffing huge little chunks of bread into their mouths. They topped this off with a dessert of sugar from a near-by package.

"Let's go," said Jerry. "I've had all I can hold."

"Me too," sighed Tuffy. "We got to get back to our apartment and start painting."

"Don't forget we got to find something to paint with," said Jerry

The mice tiptoed quietly down the hallway leading to the newly-painted room and their little mousehole apartment without seeing any sign of their old enemy Tom Cat. Suddenly, as they were about to turn the corner leading to the doorway, Jerry's sharp ears heard a very faint noise behind them. He whirled around and there at the far end of the hall was ol' Tom sneaking toward them.

"It's TOM! Let's go, Tuff! We can beat him to our apartment!" squeaked Jerry. The two little mice whipped around the corner and stopped dead at the threshold of the door. They were horrified to see the floor of the room was covered with a fresh coat of thick gluey stuff. While they were out in the pantry the painters had returned and varnished the floor!

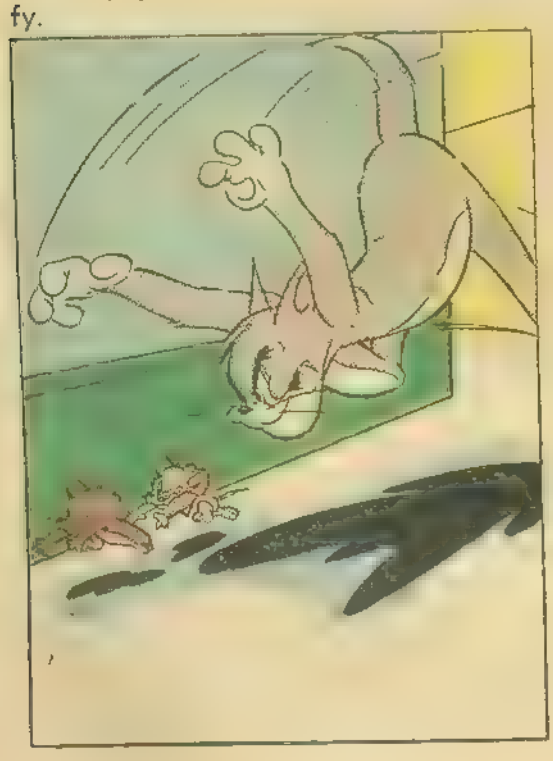
"We can't run on that stuff!" cried Jerry. "We'll get stuck!"

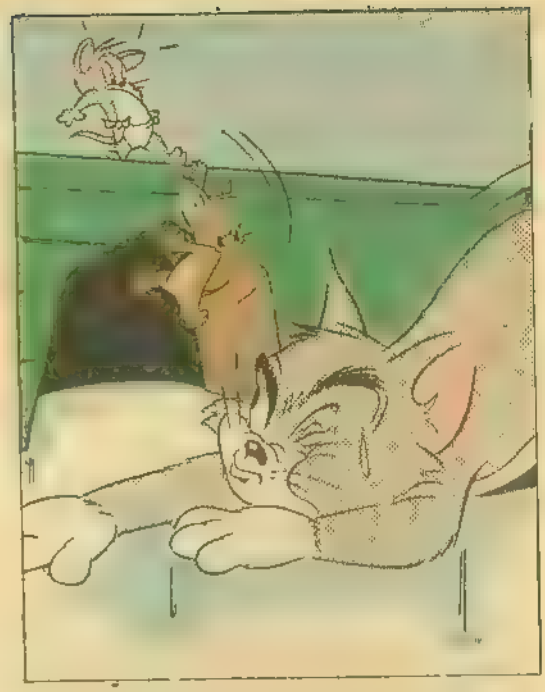
"What're we gonna do?" squeaked Tuffy. "Tom's almost on top of us!"

"Follow me!" said Jerry desperately. He jumped up on the baseboard, which was almost dry, and began to make his way slowly along the slanted top. Tom turned the corner just in time to see Tuffy disappear to one side of the doorway. Tom was in such a hurry to head the mice off before they reached the safety of their mousehole that he didn't notice the freshly painted floor. He made two long leaps across the floor and came to a sitting stop alongside the mousehole. The triumphant expression on his face changed to surprise. He tried to stand up. But he was firmly stuck to the floor.

Meanwhile, Jerry and Tuffy, who were slowly inching along the narrow top of the baseboard, noticed Tom's plight.

"Keep going!" Jerry shouted to Tuffy.





"B-but he's sitting right by our door!" cried Tuffy.

"Can't you see he's stuck!" said Jerry "He can't touch us!"

The mice worked their way along the baseboard until they were directly over the doorway to their mousehole and only a few inches from the helpless Tom. Then they swung down and into their apartment

"Wow," squeaked Tuffy delightedly, "look at him out there! He's stuck down like a postage stamp!"

"Say! Our problem is solved!" cried Jerry. "I know how we're gonna paint our apartment"

Jerry then reached outside and grabbed the end of Tom's tail which was swishing back and forth angrily. He dragged it into the mousehole and dipped it into one of the paint-filled bottle caps. It took both of the little mice to hold the struggling tail, but they finally finished painting the whole apartment without getting a drop of paint on themselves. Well, hardly a drop of paint, anyway.

Later the lady of the house discovered Tom sitting on the new varnish. Judging by the noises that were made, he didn't like it at all.

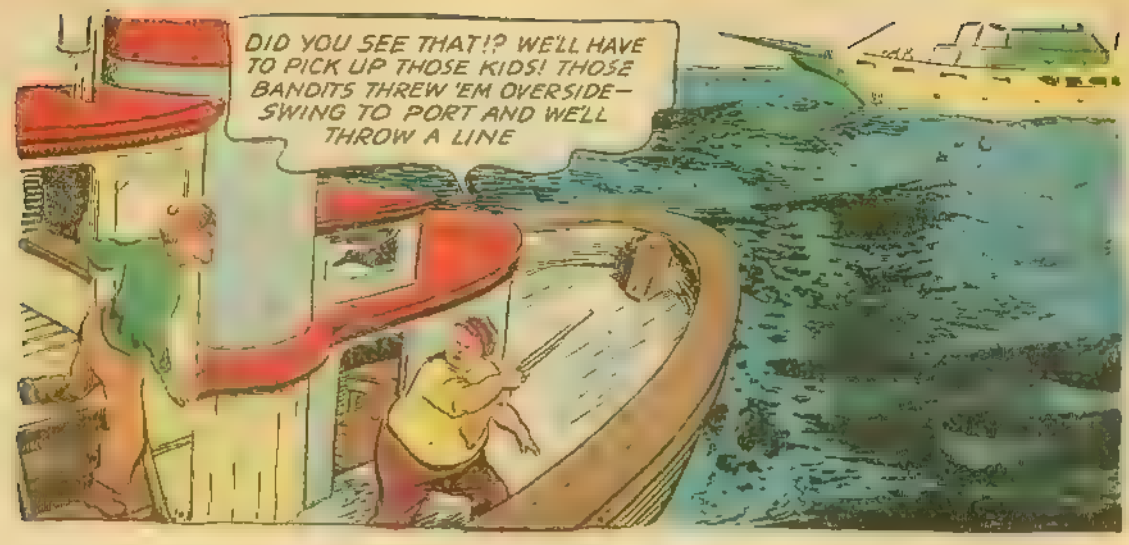
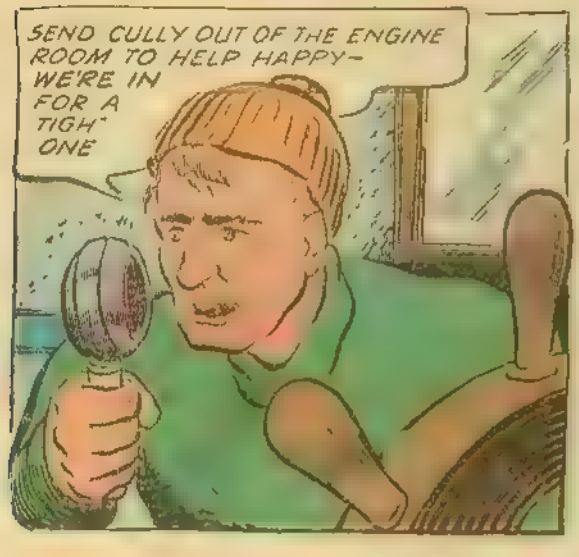
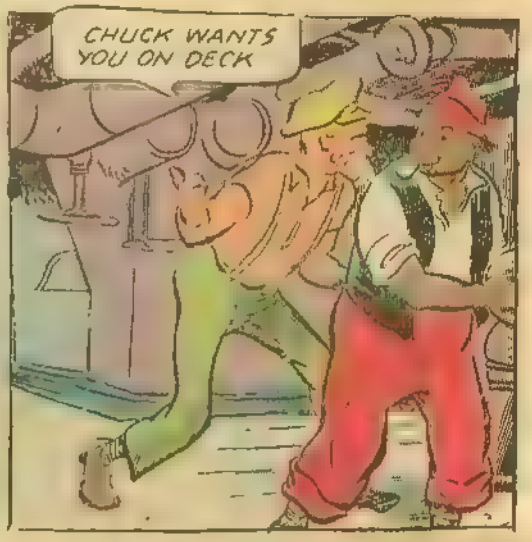
HEAVE 'EM OVER THE SIDE!
SHOULD HAVE DONE THIS BEFORE.



DID YOU SEE THAT!? WE'LL HAVE TO PICK UP THOSE KIDS! THOSE BANDITS THREW 'EM OVERSIDE— SWING TO PORT AND WE'LL THROW A LINE

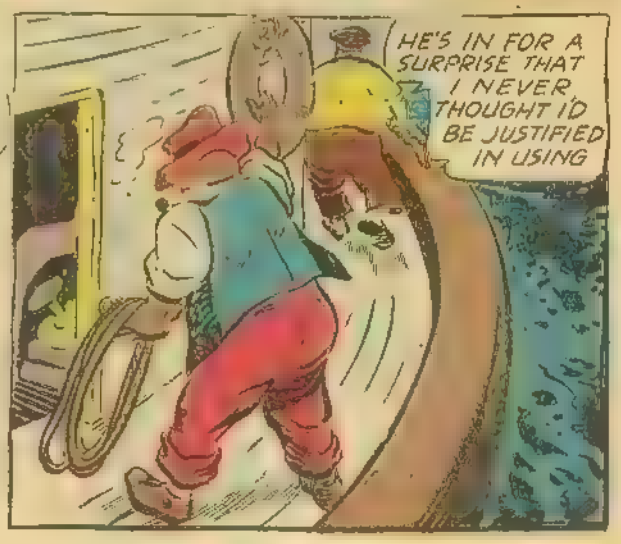


SEND CULLY OUT OF THE ENGINE ROOM TO HELP HAPPY— WE'RE IN FOR A TIGHT ONE

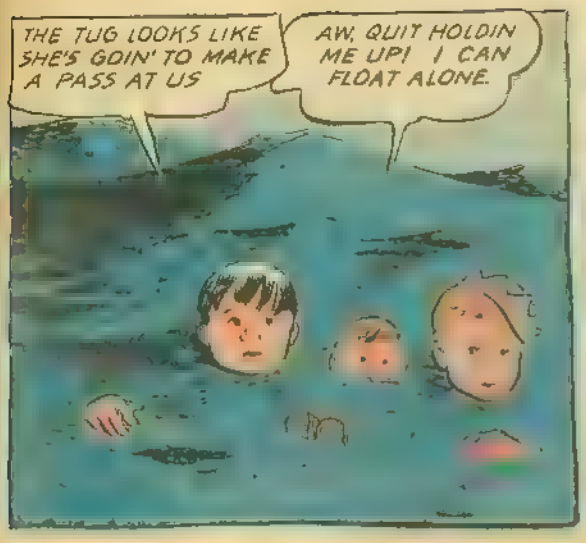


CHUCK WANTS YOU ON DECK

GET A LINE—WE'RE GOING TO PICK UP THOSE KIDS
SATURN'LL BLOW US TO HALIFAX WHEN WE DO



HE'S IN FOR A SURPRISE THAT I NEVER THOUGHT I'D BE JUSTIFIED IN USING



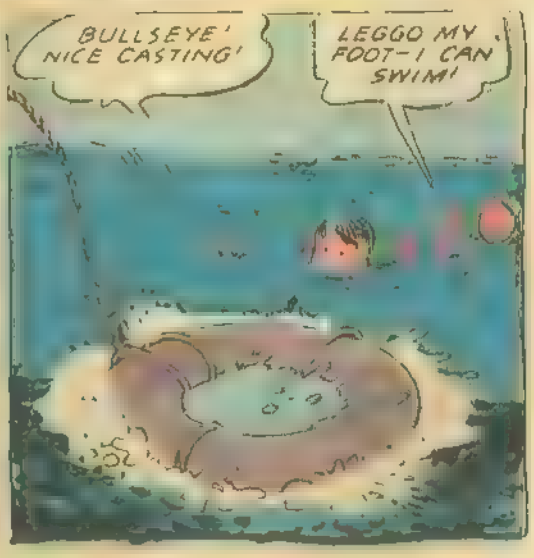
THE TUG LOOKS LIKE SHE'S GOIN' TO MAKE A PASS AT US
AW, QUIT HOLDIN ME UP! I CAN FLOAT ALONE.

HE'LL BITE ON THIS—WHEN HE COMES BROADSIDE LET HIM HAVE IT.

AHOY THE JOLLY ROGER! I'VE GOT A BAZOOKA! LET US PICK UP THOSE CHILDREN OR I'LL DROP AN EGG ON YOUR NEST OF RATS!

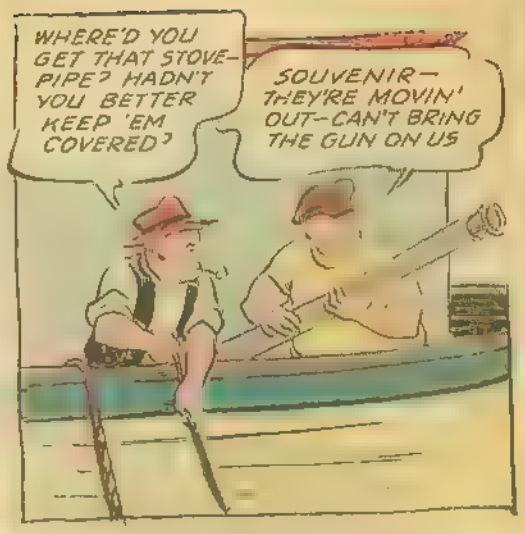
TAKE A SNAPSHOT AT HIM! HE HASN'T GOT THE NERVE TO FIRE THAT THING
SNAPSHOT HIM YOURSELF—HE'S GOT NERVE ENOUGH.

STAND AWAY FROM THAT GUN OR I'LL FIRE ONE FOR THE FUN OF IT
LOOK SHARP, LADS— WE'LL DRIFT OVER TO YOU

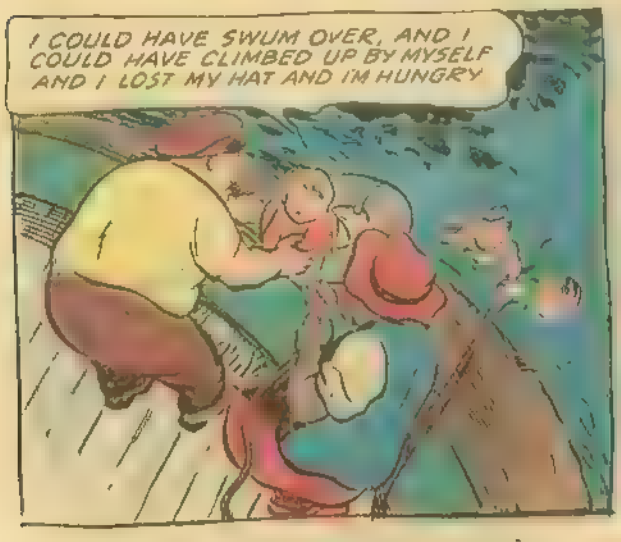


BULLSEYE! NICE CASTING!
LEGGO MY FOOT—I CAN SWIM!

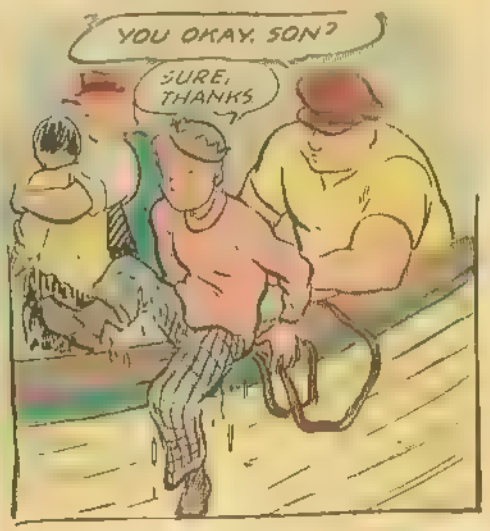
LET'S GET GOING!
YEAH... WE CAN PUT FIVE MILES BETWEEN US AND HIM WHILE HE'S PLAYING SEA SCOUT



WHERE'D YOU GET THAT STOVE-PIPE? HADN'T YOU BETTER KEEP 'EM COVERED?
SOUVENIR— THEY'RE MOVIN' OUT—CAN'T BRING THE GUN ON US

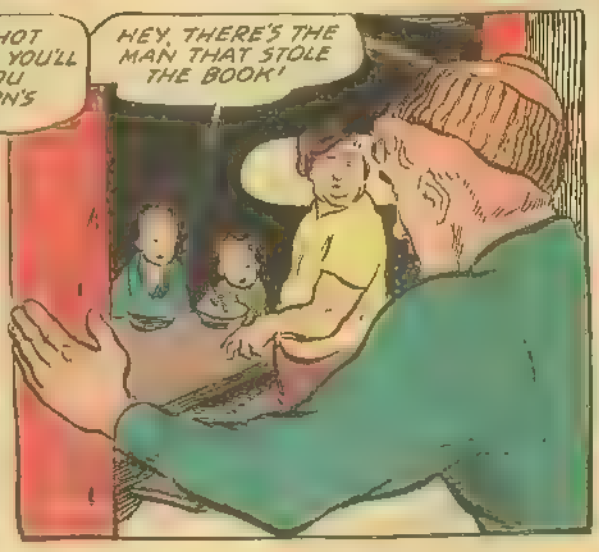


I COULD HAVE SWUM OVER, AND I COULD HAVE CLIMBED UP BY MYSELF AND I LOST MY HAT AND I'M HUNGRY



YOU OKAY, SON?
SURE, THANKS

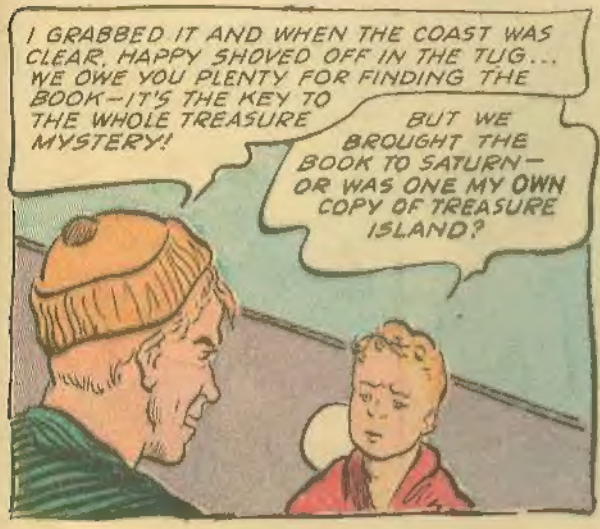
SOON AS YOU GET SOME HOT CHOW INTO YOU, MAYBE YOU'LL TELL ME HOW COME YOU WERE ABOARD SATURN'S YACHT



HEY, THERE'S THE MAN THAT STOLE THE BOOK!

WELL, BLOW ME DOWN—IT'S THE BOY I FELL OVER TRYING TO GET AWAY—AND YOU OTHERS WERE IN THE LITTLE SHACK WHERE I HID!
WE WERE?

WHY, SURE—I WAS HIDING IN THAT CHEST...SATURN FALSELY ACCUSED ME OF STEALING THE BOOK AND I DIDN'T HAVE TIME TO EXPLAIN—I HID OUT...THEN YOU KIDS CAME ALONG, FOUND THE BOOK I'D DROPPED AND DROPPED IT IN TURN BY MISTAKE.



I GRABBED IT AND WHEN THE COAST WAS CLEAR, HAPPY SHOVED OFF IN THE TUG... WE OWE YOU PLENTY FOR FINDING THE BOOK—IT'S THE KEY TO THE WHOLE TREASURE MYSTERY!
BUT WE BROUGHT THE BOOK TO SATURN—OR WAS ONE MY OWN COPY OF TREASURE ISLAND?

I BET THIS HAPPENED! WE HAD TWO BOOKS, BOTH ABOUT TREASURE ISLAND, WITH MAPS INSIDE THE COVERS. YOU DROPPED ONE, BUT WHICH ONE? WHICH IS RIGHT?

THERE'S NOT MUCH QUESTION OF THAT—THE BOOK CHUCK BROUGHT TO ME IS THE ONE WITH THE TREASURE MAP MARKED.

THAT MEANS THE BOOK WE RETURNED TO SATURN IS THE WRONG ONE—HE'S HEADING FOR THE SPERANTO RIVER MOUTH...WHEN HE FINDS HE'S GOT THE WRONG BOOK, HE'LL TRY TO GET YOUR BOOK.
